Three Links to ED Information

The three ED informational links I am sharing on my website were chosen for the different types of information that they offer. Edutopia has a wonderful webpage dedicated to articles and resources for teachers, parents, and students on the subject of support for those with an Emotional Disturbance Disability (ED). The Center for Parent Information and Resources, CPIR, offers great resources and information for parents to better understand ED and what types of interventions and supports are used in the school and the community to help students. was created by teachers, for teachers. The final site I would like to share is the National Alliance on Mental Health's (NAMI) website. NAMI Helpline has a wealth of information on local, state and national mental health resources for students, parents and teachers. The site has links to programs and support groups as well.
