Three Links to Dyslexia Information

I found three great links to information on students with dyslexia. The first link that I have chosen is Bright Solutions for Dyslexia. This site was developed by Susan Barton, the creator of the Barton System, an Orton-Gillingham-based tutoring program to help students with dyslexia with reading and spelling. The Bright Solutions website offers a wealth of information about dyslexia for parents, teachers and students, and offers links to tutoring resources. The second site that I chose is Dyslexia Reading Well. This site connects parents, educators and students to a support blog, as well as information on dyslexia and the related disorders dysgraphia, dyscalculia, and dyspraxia. The third link that I would like to share is the website for the International Dyslexia Association. This website offers information on the latest studies and assistive support practices for people with dyslexia. The site also offers a link for teacher certification through the Center for Effective Reading Instruction, along with information on conferences and seminars.
