

Carmen Schipper
Instructor: Polly Manske
SPE 613A: Exceptional Education Etiology
30 October 2020

Three Links to Visual Impairment Information

There are several helpful resources available for people interested in learning more about supports for students with visual impairment and blindness. The first link that I have chosen is the American Foundation for the Blind. This site offers excellent information for teachers and parents on the many options for educational support and assistive technology for students with visual impairment. The second site that I chose is the Center for Parent Information & Resources. The webpage has many resources for parents, students, and educators. The site also explains how to apply for state services in the program, as well as information on different therapies and services. For my final link, I chose the website for the Project Ideal. This site gives parents and educators information on assistive technology and offers many links to local and national websites for the visually impaired.